PREFACE.

---

THE present edition of the Hand-Book has been issued in deference to a very strongly-expressed wish on the part of persons actively engaged in the charitable work of this city, that some regular means should be provided for ascertaining year after year the financial and general condition of the principal Benevolent Institutions of New York. There is also a natural desire on the part of the public to know, when called upon for subscriptions, what the standing of any Society may be when thus suddenly brought before their notice.

It is generally safe to assume that Societies whose names do not appear in this Hand-Book have been excluded for some reason deemed sufficient by the Board of United Charities. There is, however, one exception which it will be desirable to note:—Church organizations, unless of a somewhat general character, with extensive operations, have, as a rule, been excluded. If these had appeared, it seems difficult to know where the line could be drawn, for nearly all the churches have institutions connected with them of a charitable nature; and there are some 489 churches in the city.

The returns have been compiled from figures furnished by the Societies themselves; where these are incomplete, no fault can be attributed to the editor, for where necessary three applications have been made for the information required.

In a year of financial distress like the present, it may be well to note the general falling off in the subscriptions to that most useful class of charities—the dispensaries. On the other hand, the amount contributed from the Excise Fund, in conformity with Chap. 221, Laws of 1875, has been unusually large. In the year 1876 the sum of $555,027.04 was contributed from this source.

One word more as to the classification adopted. The object of the editor has been to make this work what its name implies, a Hand-Book for ready reference by all those who are engaged or interested in the relief of distress. Visitors among the poor should know the proper mode of application or of admittance to such institutions as are intended to deal with the case brought under their notice, and they should be able when in doubt to refer at once to this book. It would probably be wise if the expense of carrying on so many forms of Charitable Relief could be reduced by the consolidation of some of the Societies engaged in the same class of work, for the cost of management, office rent, and printing forms a considerable first-charge on the subscriptions of the public. There can be no use in duplicating societies unless under very peculiar circumstances; and any appearance of running institutions for the benefit of private individuals, whether founders or managers, should be steadily frowned down by the vigilance of the press and the awakened intelligence of the public.

The charge of visiting the applicants for relief from the City Poor Fund has again been undertaken by volunteer committees of visitors throughout the various Wards of the City, at the request of the Commissioners of Charities and Correction. The following Societies have taken a principal share in providing such committees, or in assuming the duty themselves :

St. Vincent de Paul's Society.

Children's Aid Society.

St. John's Guild.

St. Andrew's Society.

St. George's Society.

German Society.

Harlem Dispensary.
